HISTORY OF TEMPERANCE HILL SCHOOL

Five miles from Scottsboro, Alabama, one-fourth of a mile south of highway 32, on a slight elevation overlooking some very lovely natural scenery, stands Temperance Hill School.

For more than 75 years the school at the present location of Temperance Hill has been playing its part in shaping the lives and molding the character of the citizenship of our great country by the training it has given the boys and girls of the surrounding area.

In its beginning the school was called "Union". Later, by reason of some humorous incident, it became "Bullet Ridge", which name it bore until a new building was erected and C. S. Brewton, then County Superintendent of Education, suggested the name "Temperance Hill", which was accepted.

Three much beloved teachers who wielded great influence in its early history were Miss Queen Mullens, Miss Sallie Jenkins (Mrs. Dave Wallace), and Miss Clara Young.

From this school have gone out teachers, preachers, doctors, high-ranking army and navy officers, electricians, bankers, and successful men and women in many other fields of service.

The first teachers walked or rode horseback over muddy and almost impassable roads. Their pupils all trudged through the mud and mire to their school. Now, the teachers come in cars, and three school busses transport the children.

The old original log building was replaced by a framed, one-room structure about 56 years ago. About 43 years ago another room was added. This building was remodeled 32 years ago into the present four-room building.

The six elementary grades are taught by the following three teachers:

Mrs. L. H. Dicus, Principal and grades 5 and 6
Mrs. M. R. Hall, grades 3 and 4
Mrs. E. M. Britt, grades 1 and 2
